SUPPLEMENT TO REPORT NO.

1. On 18 June¹ CHOU En-lai went to Moscow and returned to Peiping on 20 June. On the evening of 20 June MAO Tse-tung called a meeting at which the following decisions were made:²
- To speedily regulate and replace troops during the Korean peace talks and periodically create clashes large enough to hold United States forces in Korea.
 - To continue using the title "Volunteers"³ in connection with the Japanese Liberation Army which is scheduled to invade and occupy Japan and Taiwan prior to the signing of the Japanese peace treaty.
 - To continue using the name "Volunteers"³ in aiding the Democratic Republic of Vietnam and to begin an offensive there.
 - To use newly-furnished Soviet equipment in Korea in the event of renewed fighting, and to proclaim that these weapons were donated by people who are whole-heartedly supporting the Chinese Communist government in the fight against its enemies.

2. On 24 June the Chinese Communist Supreme Council⁴ held a meeting somewhere in the western hills near Peiping under the chairmanship of MAO Tse-tung, at which the following decisions were made:
- a. During the peace talks the Korean Communist will deliberately prolong the negotiations by presenting difficult terms and creating "unfortunate incidents", so as to hold United States forces in Korea.
 - b. The Chinese Communist will invade Taiwan about mid-August, as it is believed the United States may aid the Nationalists without troops of other nations.
 - c. If both China and the Soviet Union are not invited to participate in the formation of a Japanese peace treaty, the Communists will attack Japan using their international volunteer force.

25X1A 1. [REDACTED] Comment. In the preliminary dissemination of this report the date of CHOU's departure for Moscow was erroneously set down as 8 June.
